A childhood dream now becomes reality for Lebanese model, Danielle Salamouny. Miss Salamouny is in Fiji and is one of the 18 supermodels participating in the World Supermodel Pageant held at Amunuca Island Resort & Spa in the Mamanuca Group.

Miss Salamouny, 22, is also the crowned supermodel for this year's Miss Lebanon Supermodel Pageant that was held in Lebanon a week ago.

She is one of the 18 models contesting the World Supermodel crown.

She stated that it was her father's advice to her as a young girl that saw her putting off countless offers from many modelling agencies to continue her studies.

My parents are my role model. They supported me all the way but my father's advice to me was always to put education as priority and that was exactly what I did. After graduating last month, I didn't have any other things to do, so when a friend of mine told me about this pageant, I decided to try it out, she said.

Miss Salamouny stated that the friendships she has encountered for the last three days will be the most cherished moments of her modelling career.

I have made friends from the Philippines, Australia and even Fiji. I never knew Fiji existed and now I am happy that I am here. I love Fiji and the people are just wonderful, I feel so relaxed and it is so stress free, she said.
